THE DEAN'S WELCOME

Hello, Everyone,

On behalf of the UT Dallas Naveen Jindal School of Management community, I want to offer you a warm, Texas-style welcome to the Fourth Annual Global Strategy and Emerging Markets Conference!

We are delighted to see that scholars, students, practitioners and diplomats are converging at our Center for Global Business. Led by Professor Mike Peng and Hubert Zydorek, our Center for Global Business has emerged as a nucleus for international business education and research, with a particularly strong emphasis on global strategy and emerging markets.

Blessed by our location, UT Dallas has become one of the best research universities in Texas. With more than 9,000 students, the Jindal School is the largest school within UT Dallas, and it has a strong national and international reputation. The newest U.S. News & World Report rankings put our Full-Time MBA program at No. 38, our part-time MBA program at No. 17, and our MS in Supply Chain Management program at No. 20. Poets & Quants this year ranked our online MBA program No. 10, and The Princeton Review and Entrepreneur magazine ranked our MS in Innovation and Entrepreneurship program No. 11. In terms of top-tier journal publications, the Jindal School is No. 4 worldwide in research contributions 2014-2018, according to the 2019 UT Dallas Top 100 Business School Research Rankings™.

Few universities in the United States offer as comprehensive a set of degree programs dedicated to global business as we do — at the undergraduate, master's and PhD levels. Our world-class faculty publish some of the most influential and widely cited research. Students flock to our programs. Businesses are eager to tap into our talent pool. UT Dallas is truly a center for global business.

To make the conference a success, we appreciate the contributions from co-sponsor schools Cornell University, Northeastern University and the University of Miami. We also are grateful to other contributing organizations — the Consulate General of Canada; the Ministry of Foreign Affairs, Mexico; the Society for the Advancement of Management Studies, Durham, U.K.; the City of Richardson, Texas; the Jack and Anne Graves Charitable Foundation, Dallas, Texas; Group Lamerica; Haynes and Boone; Altair Global and Brewster Waddell.

In closing, I offer you my own and the Jindal School's best wishes for a successful conference.

Hasan Pirkul, PhD

Dear Global Strategy and Emerging Markets (GSEM) Conference attendees:

As Mayor for the City of Richardson, Texas, it is my honor to welcome you to the Fourth Annual Global Strategy and Emerging Markets (GSEM) Conference on May 8-10, 2019, at The University of Texas at Dallas Naveen Jindal School of Management.

Global strategy and emerging markets is an ever changing and growing necessity for the success of organizations. We are appreciative of the mission of The University of Texas at Dallas Center for Global Business (CGB) and its partners Cornell University Emerging Markets Institute (EMI), Northeastern University Center for Emerging Markets (CEM) and the University of Miami Center for International Business Education and Research (CIBER) for providing resources and strategies, professional development and growth, and networking opportunities. Resulting discussions show how national and international politics affect the global economy and how advancing technologies has played a role over time in enabling companies to maximize recoveries and profits. The City of Richardson undoubtedly benefits from the work of these many students, practitioners, and entrepreneurs who receive support from organizations such as CGB and its partners.

We are happy that you have chosen Richardson for this event, and we trust that you will feel welcomed and at home while here. It gives me great pleasure to share our fast-growing dynamic and innovative city with such a diverse and impressive group. Richardson continues to be recognized nationally as the Telecom Corridor® which is home to over 500 high tech and telecommunications companies as well as home to insurance, finance, and other companies, making Richardson the second highest employment center in the Dallas-Fort Worth metroplex.

Again, we are pleased to have you join us and best wishes for much continued success in providing stimulating sessions, education, and networking opportunities for junior scholars, doctoral students, and academics. I hope you have a truly enjoyable and informative event here in Richardson, Texas.

Sincerely,
Paul Voelker
Mayor of Richardson

THE CONFERENCE CO-CHAIRS WELCOME

May 8, 2019

Dear Participants:

On behalf of The University of Texas at Dallas Center for Global Business (CGB) and partners — Cornell University Emerging Markets Institute (EMI), Northeastern University Center for Emerging Markets (CEM), and the University of Miami Center for International Business Education and Research (CIBER) — we want to welcome all of you to the Fourth Annual Global Strategy and Emerging Markets Conference!

Previous GSEM conferences have been held in Miami (2016 and 2018) and Boston (2017). From an entrepreneurial start launched by colleagues at the University of Miami and Northeastern University, GSEM has blossomed to become an annual conference series now with four co-sponsor schools.

GSEM provides a platform to bring together, from around the world, like-minded senior and junior scholars, doctoral students, practitioners, policymakers and diplomats in the fields of international business, strategic management, cross-cultural management, technology strategy and global entrepreneurship, with a focus on global strategy and emerging markets.

The conference theme this year is “Institutional Complexities and Strategic Responses in the New Global Economy.” The new global economy is at a crossroads. Forces of “de-globalization” are endeavoring to slow globalization. Technological advances are penetrating more aspects of human life. Engines of economic growth are readjusting to the “new normal.” Overall, institutions as “the rules of the game” can no longer be viewed as static and invisible. Instead, a series of the rules of the game — ranging from national and international politics to technological standards and competition policies — are changing and their complexities are increasing. Such institutional transitions are forcing managers and entrepreneurs to search for new, innovative strategies. How do firms led by managers and entrepreneurs eager to grow strategically respond to a new global economy with such heightened institutional complexities? This is the big question on which our contributors will focus.

Enjoy the festivities!

INSTITUTIONAL COMPLEXITY FACING EMERGING MARKET FIRMS

Yadong Luo, University of Miami, U.S.

Abstract: What we know and what we don't about institutional complexity in general and in emerging markets in particular. I'll emphasize under-attended dimensions of this complexity, including multiplicity, heterogeneity, multi-directionality, changeability, and ambiguity, followed then by my perspective toward how emerging market firms should respond to such institutional complexity in both home and host countries as they go global.

Yadong Luo is the Emery M. Findley Distinguished Chair and professor of management at the University of Miami. He is also an elected fellow of Academy of International Business (AIB) and the recipient of two dozen research, teaching and service awards. Luo has emerged as the world's top research scholar in international management since the mid-90s. He has published over 170 articles in major refereed journals in management and international business, including AMJ, ASQ, AMR, SMJ, JIBS, JAP, Org. Science, among others. He also authored more than a dozen books and about 100 other publications. His research interests include global corporate strategy, global corporate governance, international joint ventures, and management in emerging economies, among others. Luo's research record includes seminal pieces on important and timely topics, such as co-opetition in international business, business-government relationships, cross-cultural cooperative strategies, multinational enterprises in emerging markets, and international expansion of emerging market enterprises.

He is also an expert in research on several frontier issues, such as dynamic capabilities in global business, cultural friction in international interactions, organizational justice in inter-firm relationships, anti-corruption in organizations, opportunism in inter-firm exchanges, global language design, and global dimensions of corporate governance. His writing on the recent development of business and management in emerging markets, notably China, is particularly path-breaking and offers a wealth of understanding of this critical context and business activities that are unfolding there. According to Google Scholar, his works have been cited over 30,000 times by other scholars. Luo received his PhD from Temple University. Prior to coming to the United States, he was a provincial official in charge of international business in China. He is an international advisory board member or distinguished honorary professor of several business schools and universities in China and Asia.

HOW TO PUBLISH IN ACADEMIC JOURNALS: WRITING A WELL-ORGANIZED INTRODUCTION SECTION

David Ahlstrom, Chinese University of Hong Kong, China

Abstract: Publishing in quality academic journals is often challenging. Authors who want to improve their chances of publishing in management and allied business and social science journals can save themselves much time and frustration by ensuring that manuscripts are consistent with the journal's aims and scope and what the field requires in terms of improvements to current theory and evidence. It is well-understood if a manuscript lacks theoretical grounding or makes significant methodological or research design mistakes, it will likely be rejected. Researchers in the social sciences are typically well-trained in methods and research design. But many scholars have much less training on situating, motivating, and organizing manuscripts. Oftentimes, an author may face rejection of his or her manuscript not because of bad data or methods, but because of major framing and organizational issues with the paper, often in the introduction, as well as a lack of clear contributions. These problems are addressed within the context of writing a clear research question and introduction section, which form the basis for the overall organization of the paper. Numerous helpful sources are also provided.

David Ahlstrom (PhD, New York University) is a professor at The Chinese University of Hong Kong. He obtained his PhD in management and international business after working several years in government and industry, including the information technology field. His research interests include managing in Asia, innovation, entrepreneurship and venture capital, decision-making, and management history. Professor Ahlstrom has published over 100 peer-reviewed articles in journals such as the Strategic Management Journal, Academy of Management Review, Journal of International Business Studies, Journal of Management Studies, Organization Science, R&D Management, Journal of Business Venturing, Academy of Management Perspectives, and Brown Journal of World Affairs. His work has also appeared multiple times in The Wall Street Journal. He co-authored the textbook International Management: Strategy and Culture in the Emerging World and guest edited two special issues of Entrepreneurship: Theory & Practice. Professor Ahlstrom has also guest edited four special issues of Asia Pacific Journal of Management, and one special issue of International Small Business Journal. He is currently editing a special issue of Journal of Management Studies on the “New Normal” in business. He was Senior Editor of APJM 2007–2009, before serving as APJM's Editor-in-Chief from 2010–2012, and is currently Consulting Editor for APJM. Professor Ahlstrom is also Senior Editor of Journal of World Business. He was recently recognized as a ‘Highly Cited Researcher’ (from Clarivate Analytics / Thomson-Reuters), in the top 94 (top 1%) in ‘Economics and Business’ researchers for Web of Science citations (for the years 2006–2016).

WILL RUSSIA HAVE A ROLE IN THE CHANGING GLOBAL ECONOMY? CONTRASTING PERSPECTIVES THROUGH WESTERN AND RUSSIAN LENSES

Sheila Puffer, Northeastern University, U.S.

Abstract: The predominant Western view of Russia, its economy and role in the global economy is that the more things change, the more things remain the same, referring to the inefficient Russian economic institutions overseen by oppressive political structures. This view is consistent with the typical Western cultural dominance in cross-cultural and strategic management theory and practice. In short, why are not they like us? Yet, a more complex and dynamic picture of culturally based institutional change suggests the possibility of an important and relatively stable role for Russia in the global economy. Through the Western lens, Russia has a deteriorating institutional environment for democracy and human rights that has severely undermined democratically oriented institutions and business innovation in Russian society, and requires sanctioning. Through the Russian lens, Russia appears to have returned to institutional arrangements based on cultural values steeped in the country's history, rather than the imported notions of liberal democracy and free markets prevalent in the Yeltsin era. This discussion examines institutional changes including expansion of predominantly state-owned multinational companies, Russia's current position in key international economic sectors, and resulting views about Russia's role in a world economy that is undergoing fundamental change and uncertainty.

Sheila M. Puffer is University Distinguished Professor at Northeastern University, Boston, where she is a professor of international business at the D'Amore-McKim School of Business. She is also an associate at the Davis Center for Russian and Eurasian Studies at Harvard University, and has served as program director of the Gorbachev Foundation of North America. In 2015 she was a visiting research professor at the Graduate School of Business at Stanford University, and a fellow at the Jordan Center for the Advanced Study of Russia at New York University in 2019. Her co-authored book, Hammer and Silicon: The Soviet Diaspora in the US Innovation Economy, was published by Cambridge University Press in 2018. Dr. Puffer has been recognized as the #1 scholar internationally in business and management in Russia, the former Soviet Union, and Eastern Europe according to a 2005 Journal of International Business Studies article. Dr. Puffer has more than 160 publications, including over 80-refereed articles and 11 books. She earned a diploma from the Plekhanov Institute of the National Economy in Moscow, and holds BA (Slavic Studies) and MBA degrees from the University of Ottawa, Canada, and a PhD in business administration from the University of California, Berkeley.

KEYNOTE SPEAKER

INSTITUTIONS, ENTREPRENEURIAL STRATEGIES, AND PERFORMANCE: IMPERATIVES FOR THE GLOBAL COMPETITIVE LANDSCAPE

Michael A. Hitt, Texas A&M University and Texas Christian University, U.S.

Abstract: Entrepreneurial activity is important in a country's economic development and growth. It is also often critical for firms to compete effectively in the global economy. Thus it is important to understand how institutions affect entrepreneurial activity. I examine how different types of institutions influence the development of new ventures and the entrepreneurial strategies of established firms. There are multiple types of institutions (e.g., formal and informal) and they exist at multiple levels (national, regional, local/city). While individual institutions can and do have effects on entrepreneurial activity, the combinative effects of multiple institutions are often much more complex and influential. And, institutions evolve over time, more rapidly in emerging economies and less so in developed economies. In some cases, Institutional weaknesses present entrepreneurial opportunities especially for informal entrepreneurship. Informal entrepreneurship (operating outside of the formal economy) often represents a significant amount of economic activity in emerging and developed countries. Thus, policymakers, entrepreneurs and executives of established firms must understand the complex effects of institutions in order to guide their own strategies and efforts.

Michael A. Hitt is a University Distinguished Professor Emeritus at Texas A&M University and a Distinguished Research Fellow at Texas Christian University. His work has been published in many of the top scholarly journals and the Times Higher Education listed him among the top scholars in economics, finance and management. An article in the Academy of Management Perspectives lists him as one of the top two management scholars in terms of the combined impact of his work both inside (i.e., citations in scholarly journals) and outside of academia. He is a former editor of the Academy of Management Journal and a former co-editor of the Strategic Entrepreneurship Journal. He is a Fellow in the Academy of Management, the Strategic Management Society, and the Academy of International Business. He is a former President of both the Academy of Management and the Strategic Management Society. He has received honorary doctorates from the Universidad Carlos III de Madrid and Jonkoping University. He has received the Irwin Outstanding Educator Award from the BPS Division and the Distinguished Service Award and the Distinguished Educator Award from the Academy of Management.
