Speaker Bio

- Shobana Radhakrishnan leads Google TV engineering at Google, focusing on experience, personalization and cloud systems. Prior to this, she led teams that built high scale publishing platforms enabling personalization at Roku. Her experience also includes engineering leadership roles in companies such as Netflix, Symantec and Yahoo as well as startups. She loves building great teams and products, and always enjoys connecting about TV, media or tech architectures and processes.

- Shobana is a big believer in diversity in tech and has been a volunteer, mentor and advisor for several women in their careers for over 20 years as part of formal and informal programs. She also has run a not-for-profit grassroots organization in the California Bay Area working with middle and high schools helping girls aspiring for STEM careers.

- Shobana has a Masters' in Computer Science from the University of Illinois at Urbana Champaign and a Bachelor's degree in Electrical and Electronics Engineering from the College of Engineering, Guindy. She grew up in Chennai, India and now lives in Saratoga, California with her husband and two children.